A brand-new way to split the bill

There's now a new way to share costs directly in Swish. Under the new "Together" tab, you can send several requests at once and keep track of who owes what, in an interface that feels secure and intuitive.

It's Swish at its most natural: fast, inclusive and instantly familiar.

When the boring part takes care of itself

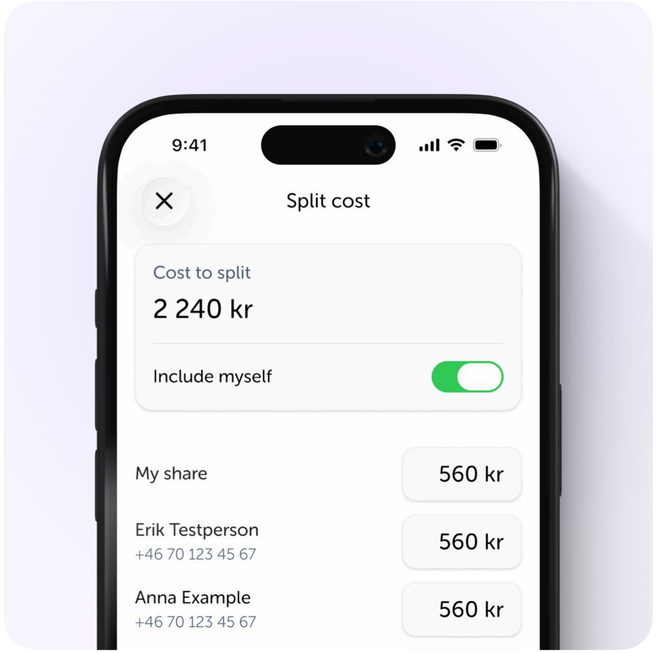

Everything that usually makes it such a hassle to cover the cost for a whole group has been designed away. The new feature takes over the calculations, the reminders and the awkward chasing, all in a few taps.

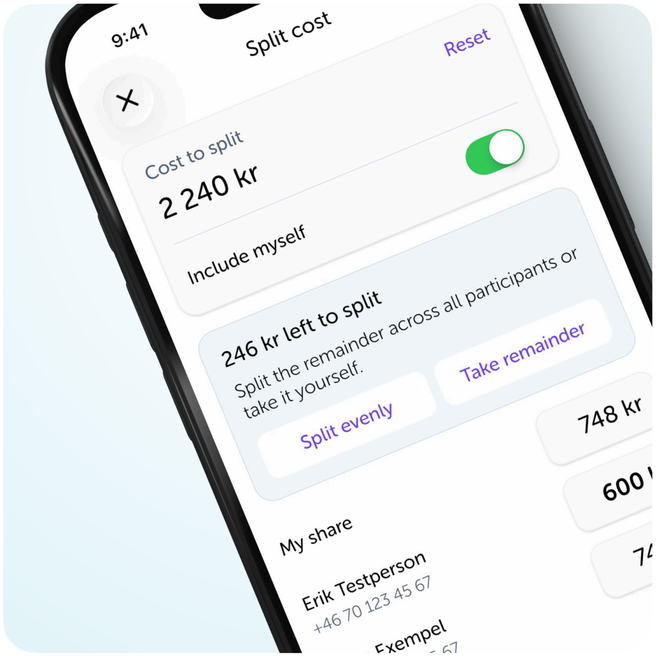

What's left is the part that actually matters: the dinner, the trip or the gift.

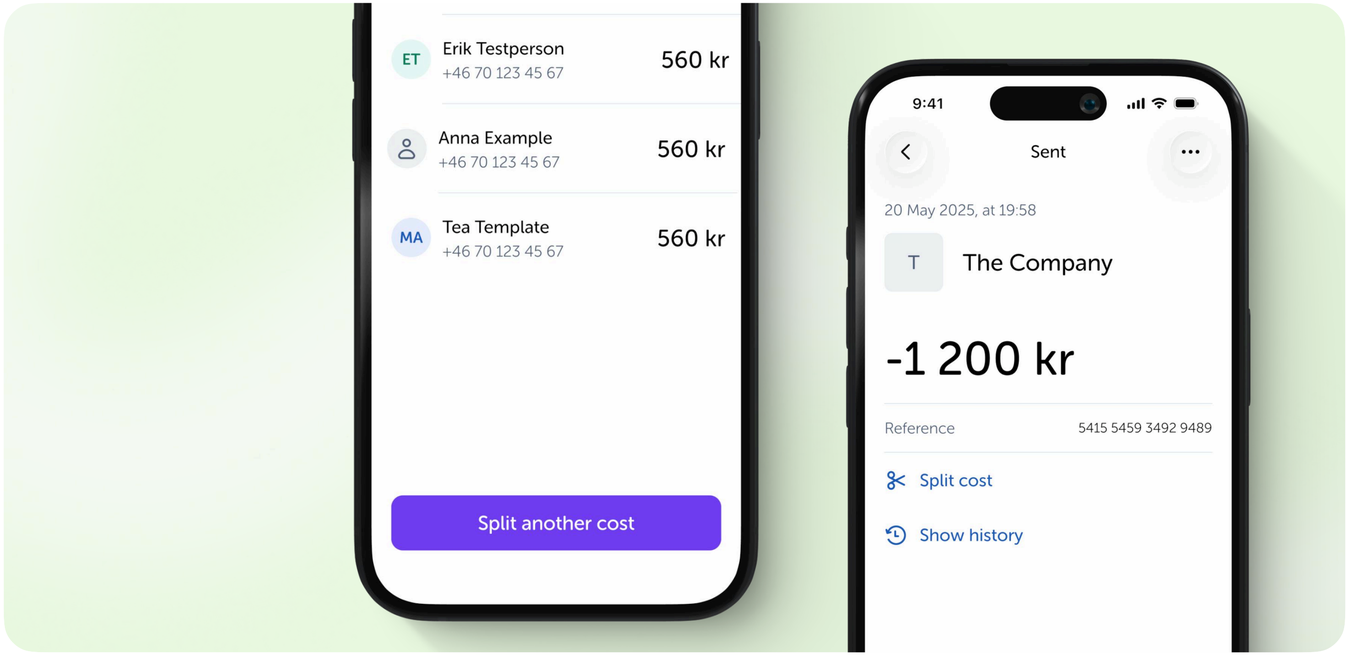

An interface that erases social friction

The flow runs on its own inside a fully transparent overview, so attention moves from the administrative to the human. An inclusive design principle carries the load for the user the whole way through.

It's a carefully thought-through interaction design that takes away the social friction and makes paying with Swish an easy part of social life.
